

Try now to put yourself back 500 years to the time of the Reformation, the division of Christianity and ecclesial renewal that took place in various directions.

A small group – who became known as Anabaptists – had convictions that were not acceptable to the authorities and the society at large. This led to them being opposed for centuries.

Immerse yourself in the tremendous upheavals of society of that time. Along the station way, follow the life journey of Jacob Baltzli in the time of the persecutions, the fights for survival, and the hopes for a better time.

Following the station way is free of charge but a contribution toward its maintenance would be very welcome.

Suggested amount: CHF 10.- / person

Put it in the box provided at the Minster information desk or send to (Put "Station way" on the payment slip.)

Years ago, when the minster warden put up a collection box for the Anabaptists he wasn't aware that with this he would be providing a starting point for tracing the life of the boy Jacob Baltzli. Those who choose to go on this adventure will:

- Experience the history of the Anabaptists interactively with all the senses
- Go on an exciting treasure hunt to the Anabaptist hot spots in Bern
- Locate the next stations via hidden messages, riddles and games, and
- Thereby help bring the history from back then into a modern context.
- Ideal for teams of 2 or more, it takes 1-2 hours (depending on cleverness and how fast one walks).

The station way is a joint project of the Bern Minster and Mennonite church communities

The starting details are available in German and English at the minster information desk.
